Chapter 1 by NotoriousNaga

Matania has to sit down to stop her rampant adopted child, Ali, from attacking you. "I might as well tell you my story, as Ali here is a little wary of you right now. She'll calm down, I promise." Matania says, gently petting her oddly animal-like child. Then again, the pseudo-mother herself didn't look too human herself. She, in fact, looked to be around 6 feet tall, had a whipping tail, a floating long bird-like head for gods sake, and a body with a heart shaped hole taking up the front of it. To hold it all up (literally), she stood on a pair of legs that looked amazingly weak despite the effort that would be needed to hold up such a tall figure. Her child seemed more human, looking to be young and mostly clothed by a dress-poncho that took up the most of their size. Such an odd combination.
